The vocal music under the direction of Professor P. J. Smith was a feature of the evening's entertainment. The plays were nicely staged, and the members of the cast well up in their respective parts. Origin of the Telephone "Hello."

There has been considerable speculation as to where the expression "Hello" as applied to telephone conversation originated. Frederick P. Fish, President of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, gives the credit to Thomas A. Edison, and says that Edison's greatest invention was never patented. "Years ago," said Mr. Fish, "when the telephone first came into use, people used to ring a bell and then say ponderously over the wire, "Are you there? Are you ready to talk?" "Well, Mr. Edison did away with that awkard, un-American way of doing things. He caught up a receiver one day and yelled into the transmitter one word—a most satisfactory, capable, soul-satisfying word 'Hello!' It has gone clear around the world. The Japs use it, it is heard in Turkey, Russia couldn't do without it, and neither could Patagonia."—Telephony.

A Grievance.

Members of Montgomery Hose Company No. 4 have a grievance. They claim that they were first at the fire in Montgomery street on Friday afternoon of last week, and had hose run out and connected to a hydrant and could have put the first stream on the fire but were stopped by official orders, and Phoenix Hose Company was ordered to put the water on.

Chief Engineer Nicoll when spoken to about the above incident says that there was no intentional discrimination against Montgomery Hose Company. It was a question at first whether it would be necessary to turn a stream on the fire, and when it was decided to do so he ordered Phoenix Hose Company to turn on the water because that company's hose was wet from service at the Linden avenue fire and would have to be taken to the drying tower, and under the circumstances it was not necessary to wet two lines of hose and incur additional expense of taking it to the drying tower.

Wrestling at Princeton.

The Princeton University gymnastic team gave its annual Washington birthday exhibition in the gymnasium Thursday. The Daily Princetonian says the best match of the afternoon was that between J. R. During the first ten minutes neither seemed to have the advantage, but finally Dickson managed to throw his opponent with a half Nelson and bar hold.

I desire to extend to the officials and members of the Bloomfield fire department my sincere thanks for the prompt and efficient work done by them on the occasion of the fire at my house, No. 49 Linden avenue.
